8 Steps to Creating Long-Lasting Habits

Step 1

Anchor to Routines

Attach new habits to existing routines. For example, journal for two minutes after brushing your teeth.

Step 2

Start Small & Specific

Focus on making the habit so small that it feels impossible to fail. Start with five push-ups or a short walk.

Step 3

Design Your Environment

Create an environment that supports your habit. Place a water bottle on your desk or leave a book on your pillow.

Step 4

Focus on Identity

Shift your mindset. Instead of 'I want to exercise,' think, 'I'm a person who prioritizes fitness.'

Step 5

Track & Celebrate

Use a habit tracker to visualize your progress. Celebrate small milestones to keep motivation high.

Step 6

Pair with Rewards

Create a reward system. After your habit, treat yourself to something enjoyable, like a cup of tea.

Step 7

Plan for Setbacks

Accept that setbacks happen. If you miss a day, use the 'never miss twice' rule and recommit the next day.

Step 8

Stack Habits for Growth

Once a habit is automatic, stack a new one on it. After a workout, add five minutes of meditation.

The life you want is built daily.
